Hiring Manager
Allergan Aesthetics (AbbVie)
Raleigh, NC

Dear Hiring Manager,

Allergan Aesthetics has built the most recognized aesthetic portfolio in the world, and the Aesthetic Surgical Representative role is a position where territory relationships, brand conviction, and consultative selling skill matter more than almost any other factor. Those are the areas where I have been performing at a high level for four years — and I am ready to earn a place on your Raleigh team.

At KraftMaid Cabinetry, I managed a $5.47M premium product portfolio across 23 accounts, selling to professional buyers who could always choose a lower-price alternative. Winning those accounts required deep product knowledge, a consultative approach that prioritized the account's business outcomes over short-term transaction pressure, and the confidence to position against price objections with evidence-based value. I grew market share in a contracting market and hit 145% of monthly quota in January 2026. At TTI, I made the case for premium tool brands against entrenched lower-priced incumbents through live product demonstrations — a selling motion I see clearly reflected in Allergan's competitive landscape.

I recognize that selling the BOTOX and Juvederm portfolio requires clinical product knowledge and an understanding of the aesthetics practice environment that I have not yet acquired professionally. I am treating that as an investment, not an obstacle: I am studying the product line, the competitive set, and the aesthetic practice economics so that when I walk into a Raleigh injector's office, I can have a business conversation, not a learning conversation. The core sales capabilities — relationship equity, consultative closing, territory planning, quota discipline — are already in place.

I am relocating to Raleigh without timeline constraints and am available to start immediately. I would welcome the opportunity to discuss the Aesthetic Surgical Representative role and how my background maps to what Allergan needs in this territory.

Sincerely,
Collin Celic
