Relocating to Charlotte / Raleigh, NC — Available Immediately

Hiring Manager
Quench (Culligan)
Raleigh, NC

Dear Hiring Manager,

I have been specifically targeting the Culligan Quench territory in Raleigh because the role is one of the strongest matches I have found in this market: B2B face-to-face prospecting, new account acquisition from a cold start, a recurring-revenue service model, and a territory structure that rewards the kind of daily field discipline I have been executing for four years. I am writing to make the case that I am the right fit for this Field Account Executive role.

At KraftMaid Cabinetry, I managed a $5.47M territory across 23 accounts in greater Boston, responsible for every dollar of revenue in the geography. I combined ongoing account management with active new business prospecting — cold-calling buyers, qualifying decision-makers, and converting cold accounts into revenue contributors while protecting my existing base. I hit 145% of monthly quota in January 2026 and grew market share during an industry-wide 8% contraction. At TTI, I drove 5.15% year-over-year growth on a $4.06M multi-brand territory through daily in-person cold prospecting to business owners and purchasing managers — exactly the buyer profile Quench's Field AE targets.

The Quench business model — selling water hydration solutions to offices, manufacturing facilities, and commercial spaces on a recurring service contract — is particularly appealing to me because the value proposition is simple, the ROI is clear, and the selling is about trust and territory coverage rather than complex technical sales. My experience building account relationships from zero, managing a defined geography efficiently with CRM, and executing consistent daily field activity is exactly what generates results in this model.

I am relocating to Raleigh immediately with no timeline constraints. I am ready to hit the territory on day one. I would welcome the opportunity to discuss what the Raleigh Field Account Executive role requires and how I can make an immediate impact.

Sincerely,
Collin Celic
