Hiring Manager
Evolus
Raleigh, NC

Dear Hiring Manager,

The best aesthetic reps I have studied are not order-takers — they are practice partners who help injectors grow their business while growing the Evolus revenue line simultaneously. That consultative, partnership-first approach is exactly what I developed managing a $5.47M territory across 23 accounts, and it is what I want to bring to Raleigh as an Aesthetic Experience Manager.

At KraftMaid Cabinetry, I built trusted advisory relationships with dealer principals, designers, and professional buyers by showing up prepared, educating their teams thoroughly, and consistently delivering value that went beyond the transaction. I converted skeptical accounts into loyal brand advocates during a period when the industry was contracting 8% — which required genuine consultative skill, not just persistence. I achieved 145% of monthly quota in January 2026 by knowing which accounts to prioritize, how to position the product against competitive objections, and when to close. Before that, at TTI, I persuaded professional buyers to switch from entrenched brand relationships through performance-based demonstrations — a skillset that maps directly to AEM selling.

Aesthetic injectable sales carries a clinical dimension I will need to develop, and I am approaching that proactively. I am already studying Jeuveau's clinical profile, onset characteristics, and practice economics so that my first account conversation can center on their business, not my learning curve. My commitment is to earn my credibility in this space through preparation, not shortcuts.

I am relocating to Raleigh immediately with no start date constraints. I would love the opportunity to discuss how my consultative B2B track record translates to the Evolus AEM role in this market.

Sincerely,
Collin Celic
