Hiring Manager
Paychex
Raleigh, NC

Dear Hiring Manager,

Consultative selling to business owners through a mix of field days, referral relationship cultivation, and structured pipeline management — this is the Paychex Sales Consultant model, and it maps precisely to the way I have operated for four years. I am applying because Paychex's focus on consultative HR and payroll solutions, combined with the Raleigh market opportunity, is the right next step for my career.

At KraftMaid Cabinetry, I built my territory through a combination of managing existing accounts and developing new referral relationships with store leadership, buyers, and dealer principals. I ran structured account reviews, identified unmet needs through consultative discovery, and built the kind of trusted advisor relationships where clients called me before calling a competitor. I managed the territory through Salesforce CRM and Power BI, maintained full pipeline visibility, and achieved 145% of monthly quota in January 2026. At DCU, I sold consultatively in a high-compliance, high-volume financial environment — the exact kind of regulated, trust-dependent selling context that Paychex's HR and payroll business operates in.

Paychex's channel model — with referral relationships from CPAs, bankers, and benefits brokers alongside direct prospecting — rewards reps who can cultivate multiple relationship tracks simultaneously. My experience managing 23 accounts while also prospecting new business and maintaining referral sources is directly relevant. The compliance dimension of payroll and HR adds a layer I will need to learn, and I am prepared to invest in that education fully.

I am relocating to Raleigh immediately with no start date constraints. Three field days per week minimum is the expectation I am built for. I would welcome the opportunity to discuss the Sales Consultant role and what the Raleigh territory's pipeline looks like right now.

Sincerely,
Collin Celic
